Online Conference (Zoom)

Free for attendees and presenters

The 2021 Virtual Céfiro Conference will explore how practice, teaching and professionalization interface with the academic disciplines of Luso-Hispanic Linguistics, Literature and Cultural Studies as they are conceived within graduate curricula today.

Possible topics include:

- The representation of schools, educators and students in literature
- How teaching and education are represented in literature and film
- New approaches to the teaching of literature
- Teaching Cultural Studies methodologies
- Teaching Linguistics
- Successful Heritage Learner pedagogies
- The intersection of the Environmental Humanities and place-based teaching
- Recent pedagogical theories and methods
- Technology in the classroom
- Professionalization of women and under-represented groups in academia
- Preparing for non-academic careers
- Preparing for the job market
- Spanish and Portuguese literary studies
- Spanish and Portuguese linguistic studies

In addition to individual papers, we welcome proposals for workshops and roundtables. Presentations can be given in Spanish, Portuguese, or English.

Both individual proposals and submissions for panels of 3 to 4 papers (highly encouraged) will be considered. Each presenter will have 15 minutes and 5 minutes will be set aside for questions from the public. Workshop presenters will have 60 minutes.

Submission specifications:

The deadline for submission of abstracts has been extended to March 30th, 2021. Abstracts should be sent to cefiro@ttu.edu and antonio.ladeira@ttu.edu as Word documents. They should be approximately 200-250 words and include the following personal information: (1) presentation title; (2) full name; (3) university affiliation; and (4) e-mail address. A selection of conference papers and/or workshop reports will be published by Céfiro Graduate Student Journal.
